

How can breakthrough project performance be achieved, consolidated and enhanced for future projects?

How can construction best practice be sustained at times of recession?

Global Construction Summit

Construction Project Management Best Practice 2010 - A Springboard for the Next Decade

24 - 25 June 2010

Marriott Rive Gauche Hotel and Conference Centre
Paris, France

A unique event for world class construction professionals to meet and share knowledge about leading edge project management

An exclusive event not to be missed!

Is your company or organisation acknowledged as being at the forefront of excellence in “state of the art” international project management practice? If so, but you would like to learn more about techniques and processes adopted by like minded leading edge organisations and project management experts from around the globe, this is a unique opportunity not to be missed.

The Paris 2010 Global Construction Summit is reputed to be the first of its kind on a global scale given the diverse nature of topics covered and the range of major companies and organisations from all sectors of the construction industry worldwide participating. The event programme will incorporate an intense programme of speeches, workshops and presentations by leading project management professionals with many opportunities for discussion, debate and networking. Major Construction Clients, Contractors, Suppliers, representatives of Construction Best Practice Organisations and Academic Institutions will meet to identify the best in project management practice and set an agenda for future collaboration over the next decade on a global scale to improve construction performance.

The overarching aims of the Summit will be to:

- identify and capture leading edge project management practice, processes and techniques adopted by clients, contractors and others in the supply chain from all sectors of the construction industry
- identify the current issues for construction professionals
- determine where there may be scope for future collaboration, sharing of knowledge, benchmarking, process development and / or joint research

Some questions for speakers and delegates to address:

- How can construction best practice be sustained at times of recession?
- How do we gain a better understanding of the real value of projects?
- How is breakthrough project performance achieved, consolidated and enhanced for future projects?
- What are the real barriers to construction best practice being adopted and implemented at project level?
- How can ICT be made more effective to properly serve the needs of project teams?

Who should attend?

Chairs, Chief Executives, Directors, expert Project Managers, Policy makers, major Suppliers and service providers to the construction industry and the public sector. The chosen venue has facilities available for business meetings between delegates and their guests during the event.

An Opportunity for Networking

During the conference there will be opportunities for networking with senior executives of companies, many of which are companies operating with major programmes of work on a global scale. It will also be a rare occasion to meet Michel Virlogeux, the current President of ECI, and eminent world class structural engineer renowned for his ground breaking projects, including the Millau Viaduct, and global quest promoting innovation and recognition by governments of the value of professional engineers in society.
